Shooter survival unique

Florida school suspect's arrest contrasts with other endings

Review-Journal wire services

PARKLAND, Fla. — The carnage at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School shared all of the horror of America's worst mass shootings.

But one scene was unusual: the shooter, Nikolas Cruz, being led away alive in handcuffs after he killed 17 people at the school.

Of the 10 deadliest mass shootings in modern history, 19-year-old Cruz is the only shooter to survive. Gunmen in the Orlando, Virginia Tech, Las Vegas and Sandy Hook massacres either killed themselves or were shot dead by police.

Philip Lazarus, director of Florida International University's school psychology program, said being able to interview a mass murderer can provide useful information. He once asked an Alabama teenager whose rampage was curtailed only by a jammed gun to rate his level of depression before the shooting.

"He said, 'I had no feeling. I was like a robot. I was numb. There was no feeling going on, so I can't give you

WASHINGTON — Late-night comedian Jimmy Kimmel went after President Donald Trump on Thursday night. Incensed at Wednesday's high-school shooting in Parkland, Florida, and Trump's remarks about the carnage, a frustrated Kimmel said he wanted answers and action.

Trump had taken a different approach. A supporter of the Second Amendment, Trump delivered remarks designed to calm the fears of parents and children, and he promised to tackle school safety and "the difficult issue of mental health."

The host of "Jimmy Kimmel Live" was enraged that Trump offered no specific proposal to limit gun ownership, and he had no patience

This is the second installment in a series, Year in the Life, which follows one at-risk Clark County School District senior as he works toward graduation — highlighting districtwide issues along the way.

SIX schools since sixth grade.

That's the meandering educational route that D'Andre Burnett has traveled to get where he is today: a senior at Shadow Ridge High School who is racing to catch up so he can graduate with his classmates in about three months.

Before this year, Burnett was in danger of not getting his degree. But he got back on the right track and has been working to pass the classes he needs to graduate while still catching up on one he missed.

"I feel good about my chanc-
